Ezekiel 9:9-10:5

In poetic fashion, verse 9-10 serve as a _____ by repeating the reasons for the Lord's judgment, as they had been stated in previous verses

Fittingly, the man with the writing case also comes to announce the _____, saying that what God had commanded had been done

Chapter 10 begins with another return to familiar imagery including the sapphire expanse and the throne, but this time the man in linen is involved and has a different _____

God orders him to do a very difficult task: taking hot _____ from between the wheels below the cherubim and scattering them throughout the city, perhaps indicative of God's fading presence there

The cherubim, who often accompany God's _____, are confined to the southernmost side, shrinking as far away as possible from the image of jealousy

In addition, only the innermost court is filled with a _____, just like one that followed them during their days in the wilderness, suggesting the possibility of God preparing to be on the move once again

After God's presence is seemingly _____, God bursts forth with a show of might, revealing that He is still powerful whether the people follow Him or not

The brightness and the loud rushing sound are _____ as coming from God, no matter where a person was on the temple grounds