"Waiting is the hardest part," I've consoled friends as they anticipated test results.

Now those words echo back to me, as I await the call from my doctor. I question my advice: Is the "not knowing" stage really the most difficult? Will God put my mind and heart at ease when the results come, no matter what the tests reveal?

As I study God's Word, He has led me to His answer in Psalm 9:10: "Those who know Your name will trust in You, for You, Lord, have never forsaken those who seek You." Because I have seen Him working for my good in the past, I have complete confidence that He will work that same good in my earthly future, in addition to that glorious assurance of my eventual heavenly home.

If test results come back negative, I will know that God has reasons for this, and I will praise Him!

If they come back positive, I pray that I accept the situation and will have the courage to praise Him at that time too.

Dear grandchildren, please join me in prayer: Lord, let my life be a witness for Your goodness in whatever plan You have for me. Please bless my family, friends, and all those You put in my path, that they may see me stand firm against the devil's temptation to deny You. I don't know what tomorrow may bring, but I know that Your hand will be in it, and that comforting thought is all I need to bring peace to my heart. In the precious name of Jesus, who stood firm in His faith in the Garden of Gethsemane, we pray. Amen.
